NO REST FOR THE WICKED

Hydro-Quebec must think I'm the most outspoken, never-say-die opposition they have. I feel the majority of my editorials in some way deals with them and the impacts that they have on the Crees in some way. "Give it a rest," I can almost hear them saying.

Unfortunately this is the real world and to coin an overused cliché, "there's no rest for the wicked." Just as they haven't rested, neither shall I.

The latest in a long list of misconceptions and backroom politics deals with Hydro-Quebec and Great Whale. Even though the spokespeople at Hydro have stated that they will not do any projects that a community nixes, the reality is being twisted, deliberately or not.

Some very basic mis-impressions have arisen. In conversations with Hydro-Quebec officials and according to our reports, we've found out what Hydro-Quebec seems to think. They think the Crees are negotiating with them through the three-man task force that was set up after Premier Bouchard came up North on his visit. The task force members are: Chief Walter Hughboy, Romeo Saganash and Roderick Pachano.

Hydro is spin-doctoring Whapmagoostui's latest referendum and the subsequent GCCEA/CRA Annual General Assembly Resolution concerning the Great Whale Project. They say the referendum and resolution don't apply the their latest proposal to divert the Great Whale and Rupert rivers because this project is different from the original one which the Crees defeated.

Matthew Mukash, Chief of Great Whale, says he can't understand this attitude. "The mandate encompassed all development to the Great Whale River. It was very straightforward and clear in the mandate that the resolution represented. That mandate has to be carried out by the GCCEA. Not to do so would be contrary to the understanding by the Cree communities to respect decisions of the other communities," he said.

"This referendum and the resulting resolution were unanimous. No community voted against it. In my mind, there are no questions about it. There should be no negotiations on it. There should be nothing but the actions necessary to stop Hydro-Quebec's plans to develop the Great Whale River, whether or not the proposals change," asserted Mukash.

Given all this and Whapmagoostui's latest battle plan for a new upcoming U.S. tour (see page 7), one can only wonder exactly what it is that keeps Hydro-Quebec coming back, again and again. Even the most jaded of the public-relations department can't hope to think that the Whapmagoostui First Nation is going to allow Hydro to divert their river or disappear quietly without a fight.

Well, the latest action in this tale is that Chief Matthew Mukash will be calling Hydro-Quebec to discuss the proposed Great Whale River Diversion Project and to let them know the Whapmagoostui community does not want this project. Given that Hydro said they'll back down if a community doesn't want a project we'll keep you up to date on the developments. In this way we'll see if the forked tongue is a thing of the past when Hydro talks.

Re: Rez Notes this issues.

NEMASKA - This is to inform you that there will not be a Rez Notes this issue. The reason, or rather the reasons, being that... well... frankly, I just can't be bothered with it right now. I have too many things on my mind. Some too painful and deeply personal to mention here. You probably know what I'm talking about. Besides, you don't pay me enough. Two thousands bucks a week! What do you take me for?

The other reason for my not being able to write the (bleep) is the criticism the column received days ago by a few readers who probably and understandably want to remain anonymous. I believe their exact words were, "Where's the rez in Rez Notes? It's more like his diary now?" They're right. Sort of. You see, what our critics don't realize is that the rez is not just a place. It can be and is a state of mind. By this I mean you don't have to be on the rez to be on the rez. I hope I'm making myself clear. I know it sounds like I'm stoned, but trust me, I'm not. Besides, you know I never touch the stuff. Come to think of it, being stoned would be reason enough not to write the column. I'm sure you agree with me, as always, on that point.

Back to the critics I was talking about. Apparently, they also don't like the fact that I sometimes use the F, the S and the P words. I'm sorry but you know how I am with deadlines. Yes, some people consider them vulgar but we live in vulgar times, my dear friend! I guess you could say when the going gets vulgar, the vulgar get going. Ha! Seriously... this is very Pentecostal of them and you know how I feel about that kind of stuff. Whatever.

Before I forget, they do like the stuff on the great chef Jean Cuisine. So that's a gold star for us.

Another complaint that was passed on to me was the lack of juicy gossip in the Notes. It seems some of our readers miss hearing about their people making fools of themselves, of others or what have you. I don't care. I suppose we could make them happy and tell them about the former chief who bought an overpriced hunting dog from down south last spring only to find out at his blind that his mighty hunting dog was terrified of guns. But if we did that we'd be making fun of a former chief who's probably a very nice guy but is a lousy judge of retrievers.

Or we could mention Dakota House (no relation to the Chisasibi Houses, I'm sure), TeeVee on the Native soap opera North of 60, being beaten up at five in the morning in his Edmonton home, almost losing an ear in the process. For your information, dear editor, Dakota is recovering nicely and his assailant has been arrested, charged and was, if there is any justice, probably beaten himself. But who cares about that. I've been beaten up at five in the morning and I don't have my publicist sending out press releases about the ugly details.

These readers want to hear the tale of the very Kennedyesque chief who was doing the dirty (or whatever the fashionable phrase is this week) on one of the conference room tables with an employee only to have her brag to everybody that she was doing the chief. Oh no, we could never tell them that. The two fornicators (for that is what they are) and everybody else would feak. Trust me on this. We don't want everybody freakout out at the same time. I've seen it happen before, as have you I'm sure, and it's not a pretty sight.

There are other inane stories we could publish. There's that one I mentioned to you a few weeks ago. The one about the old chief who checked in to his suite at the Sheraton during the James Bay Project court case. He found a closet full of beer waiting for him. Reportedly, many of the other Cree guests at the Lodging found the same thing in their rooms. My sources theorize it was compliments of Hydro-Quebec. Others say it was someone from our side. I don't know.

The good old days, eh? No wonder we got such a lousy deal. What was that line in the JBNQA? The Crees agree to surrender all... I don't know if I want to laugh or cry.

Anyway, friend, that's all I needed to say. Sorry about the column this week. The fans (where do I get the ego?) will understand.

Pass on the message to everyone at headquarters that I miss them all terribly already and I love them. See you in a few days. God willing.

James A Shecapio.

A TRIBUTE TO MY BEST FRIEND, JAMES A. SHECAPIO

By Andrew Neeposh

In Loving memory of a personal Friend and Colleague

At this time, I can only thank the Lord, our maker, to have blessed me with a friend, a friend to grow to admire, respect and most of all to Love. It is very difficult for me, at this time, to accept the fact that your earthly station is complete but it gives me peace to know that you are passing on to a better world, a world of eternal peace and Love. Through faith, I have come to believe that our stations on earth are brief and are predetermined by a master architect. You have been recalled back home to be forever with the Lord, our God. You and Amanda are now at home in the everlasting arms of Love with our Lord, Jesus Christ.

You might have left this world, but I know you will always be with us in heart and spirit. James, I am very grateful to have known you, and the friendship we shared, I will forever cherish. Your passing on from this world was so sudden and very hard to believe. One day we're talking, joking around as usual and having fun. Next day you're gone. It hurts me to see you go, my friend. James, you and Amanda will always be in our hearts.

My friend, James, you have touched my life in so many ways which I am very thankful for. You were more than a friend to me, James. You were like a brother. You were always there for me when I needed someone. You were a friend I could count on to pull me through, through life's trials. You lifted me up when I was down and out, chained in the bondage of alcoholism. You instilled the pride in me to get up, stand on my feet and walk a sober life. Thank You for all the good times and the years that we had shared together, as childhood friends, colleagues and friends forever.

As a colleague, you have inspired me, through your Love to help others and serve your people to the utmost of your God-given abilities and talents. You were a man of great vision and leadership. You have left us with a legacy to think not what the community can do for us but rather what we, as individuals, can do for the community. Although, most of the time, your work was done through voluntary service, you persevered and never ceased to quit. As a colleague, I know that you did not work for recognition or prestige, but rather, through your big heart, were serving one master. I believe that the reward that you have fought for on this earth has been awarded and your efforts crowned.

You are an inspiration to us all and your spirit will live on with us as we strive to serve one master. I wish you a last farewell my friend. You and Amanda are now at home in heaven in God's Kingdom. Some day we will meet again, my friend... Forever your friend, Andrew Neeposh...

A lesson to be learned from passing away of a personal friend so close is that sometimes we take life for granted and this really hits hard when the news comes.

Written the day following the funeral service for James and Amanda.

TO LATE JAMES A. SHECAPIO AND DAUGHTER AMANDA

That day, you daughter and you were united in your quietus

That day, a moment of silence and pause was rooted in all of us.

Although I never knew you well

Although we rarely spoke to each other,

there existed a Respect and admiration for a gentleman such as you

Our acquaintance was distant

Our friendship was unknown to many

Nonetheless, our vision was common, our thoughts were Related and our feelings were comparable

What you longed for

What you believed in

What you worked for

And what you anticipated became a reality in your passing

Sad, it has been

Remorse, it has caused

Closeness between all Cree Nation members was gained

Sharing and caring was communicated

While a nation was united

You will be, both, missed very much, by so many.

May you rest in peace.

James A. Shecapio and his daughter Amanda were involved in a fatal automobile accident on Tuesday, October 21st. The shockwaves of their untimely deaths spread throughout the Cree Nation. No one could have predicted the number of people who would arrive in Mistissini to pay their respects and mourn for James and Amanda.

There are others who will tell you about James and what he meant to them and the Cree Nation. Looking at James from a journalist's perspective, I would say he had no hidden agendas, everything was above board with him, he drew people together and helped them recognize what they had in common. The voice of reason, one man called him. He took a job that was undoubtedly difficult and unlike most others had no salary, but James persisted because it was needed. From what I knew personally and was told by other people, he never displayed anger or fought around people. The list goes on.

Hearing what people had to say about James, I would try to make such a person my friend knowing that my life would be enriched by knowing him. I did call James my friend and my life was richer because of it. The staff at The Nation extends our condolences to the family and friends of James and Amanda. Their loss is one the Cree Nation felt as a whole. Rest in peace.

Correction on Community Centre story

Letter to The Nation.

I have read with interest and appreciation your article titled, "Noble steps towards the future," published in the edition of October 10, 1997, of The Nation.

On behalf of the Cree Nation of Eastmain, I would like to express our sincere appreciation for the constant support extended by your editors and the staff of your magazine The Nation to our endeavour to provide a community centre and an arena for our Members and most particularly our Youth.

However, I would appreciate if a correction could be made with regards to the first paragraph of your article. You started, "Eastmain is pushing ahead with plans to build an arena which will house a place for the Elders to meet, the children to have a daycare and for the youth of the community to have a place to play hockey throughout the blistery cold winter months, amongst other activities."

The Eastmain Community Centre will indeed be composed of many areas such as an arena, a community centre with a place for the Elders to meet, a Youth facility among others. It is very important however to state clearly that the Eastmain Community Centre will not include a place for the children to have a daycare. The Wabannutao Day Care facility is presently being constructed in a totally different area, more than one kilometre away from the Eastmain Community Centre. There is absolutely no relation between the proposed Eastmain Community Centre and the Day Care facility.

The Wabannutao Day Care facility is constructed with funding received specifically for this purpose. The Cree Nation of Eastmain is responsible for the construction which will then be placed under the full authority of the Wabannutao Day Care Corporation, a non-profit organization established for the purposes of running the Day Care facility and activities.

It is important to differentiate the Day Care facility in view of the funding received from several entities. You will certainly understand our preoccupations to ensure that no confusion may be forthcoming as a result of the wording used in the article. As we all know, certain misconceptions may endure for a long time and may affect negotiations for future funding to be received pursuant to the commitments made in the James Bay and Northern Quebec Agreement.

Considering the constant support of your magazine, we would appreciate if a correction could be printed as soon as possible in the next edition in order to prevent any misconceptions which may jeopardize our position.

Thanking you again for your efforts and your support, I remain,

Yours truly,

Chief Kenneth Gilpin, Eastmain

HYDRO-CREE COLD WAR HEATS UP

by William Nicholls

Whapmagoostui is back in international waters in its fight against the idea that Hydro-Quebec might endanger their river and homeland. A tour was recently launched to draw attention the issue in the U.S.

On October 14 at Dartmouth College, the official tour launch was off and running. The tour is designed to draw U.S. attention to Hydro-Quebec's recently announced plans to revive aspects of the controversial James Bay II hydroelectric project.

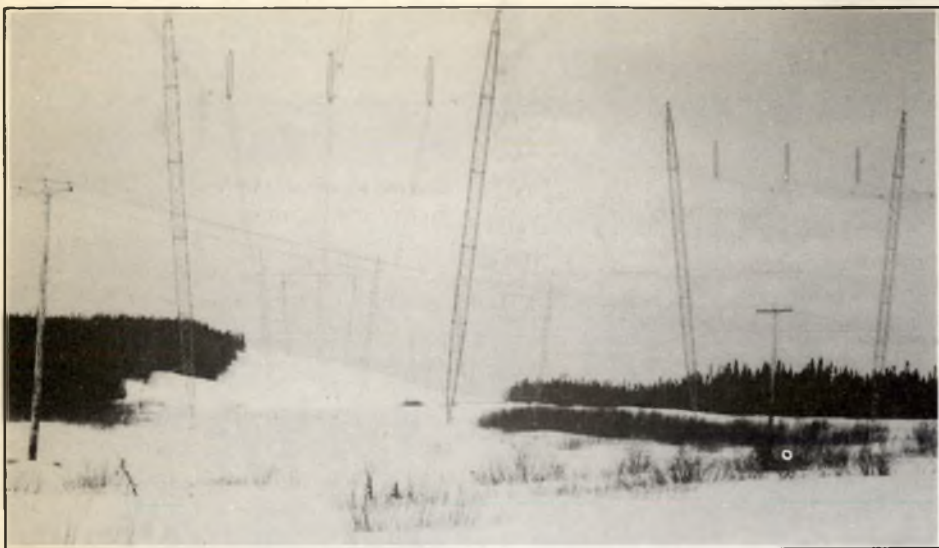

Cree activist Diane Reid and Chief Matthew Mukash of Great Whale head up the tour. Accompanying them on their journey is POWER, the documentary on the first fight. POWER follows the successful five-year international campaign waged between 1990 and 1995 to stop continued development on their homeland. The tour will take in more than 25 locations throughout the U.S. Northeast.

The new allies to the fight are the film's producers. They are organizing the film and lecture tour in collaboration with Whapmagoostui First Nation. Tour organizers say they want to sensitize Americans living in the Northeastern United States to the issue since they are the major purchasers of Quebec hydroelectricity. They also see the tour as a way of renewing old contacts. Crees remember the impact that New England and New York environmental groups played in the cancellation of Hydro-Quebec's original proposal.

Under the new proposal, Hydro-Quebec would divert the Great Whale and Rupert rivers into existing hydro facilities. Even though this is early in the fight Deputy Chief David Mastay of Whapmagoostui said, "It's better to attack the idea before it materializes any further and much money is spent on it."

Tour organizers say the film will be of particular interest to those concerned about Native and environmental issues.

Robert Kennedy Jr., a member of the National Resources Defense Council, described POWER as "a manual for indigenous people, for environmentalists and human rights groups about how to battle successfully a project like Great Whale."

HYDRO WON'T RELEASE EMERGENCY PLANS

Hydro-Quebec will not release any of its emergency preparations for a dam failure in the La Grande system.

The utility also won't release any studies on the diversion of the Great Whale and Rupert rivers; information on the water levels in the reservoirs; or six blanked-out pages in a report on the safety of the dams in the North.

All this and more was requested by The Nation under the Access to Information Act. After being turned down, The Nation launched an appeal to the Access to Information Commission. A hearing is scheduled for next February at which arguments will be presented.

In an interview, Ghislain Ouellet, Hydro's executive vice-president of production, said some studies can't be released because they were written by engineers whose point of view may be subject to debate.

"It's a point of view that could be debated with other experts. An engineer could say something isn't good, whereas others may say it's fine," Ouellet explained.

"(In emergency planning) we always speak of an extreme theoretical situation. When you say LG-1 or LG-2 will completely disappear, you will agree it's a situation that is completely theoretical. I have total confidence that the community of Chisasibi is in no danger at all."

Ouellet said six pages in the safety report were blanked out because they discuss safety at dams outside the Cree territory. But doesn't any citizen have the right to this information, regardless of where the dams are? "Theoretically, yes," Ouellet said.

Ouellet also confirmed that Hydro plans to cut the number of inspectors working in the North, but denied the cuts will be as big as Hydro unions fear. "It's alarmist to speak of significant cuts," he said.

The cut is likely to be "less than 10 per cent," said Ouellet. Some of the utility's employees in the North are underworked and "do almost nothing," he added. "These could be cut or reallocated to other areas."

A 50-per-cent cut in the number of safety inspectors was spoken of in a one-page document leaked to Hydro's Professional and Office Employees' Union, said Jacques Rodier, union vice-president. "The health of the dams is good. What would put them in peril would be to lower the number of inspections," said Rodier, himself an inspector at LG-2. "It's now at the minimum level. We can't go lower than that."

Sylvain Lesage, another union official, said inspectors are important to detecting problems early before they get serious. "Inspection is a little like insurance. If you cut the number of inspections by half, you double the risk. It's sure it's not a big risk, but it's still two times as big."

Lesage said Hydro is motivated by a policy of "risk-management." Under the policy, it's a better investment to station inspectors in more populated areas because that's where there is higher potential liability in the event of dam problems. Lesage said the calculation of potential liability includes an estimate of how much each human life is worth in dollars.

Hydro spokesman Jean-Claude Lefebvre denied Lesage's claims. "Be assured, we don't evaluate how much a life is worth. There is no risk we judge acceptable. Our policy is zero-risk. We have inspectors where there are dams, not where there is population."

COMMUNITY ASSETS

George Shecapio can be seen around the community of Mistissini. He collects not garbage but the valuables thrown out every day. He sorts through disposed material from the schools, fishing out aluminum pop cans. He also checks out the roadside for the cans. Each one that he takes makes the community that much more beautiful as well as helping the environment.

He's even helping to save electricity. High amounts of electricity are needed to produce aluminum. By recycling the can he is helping to save the environment and diminish the need for the Great Whale and Rupert hydroelectric projects. Shecapio says he found most of the cans with the tabs off. He told The Nation one youngster had been collecting the tabs for money and asked him if it was true they weren't worth anything.

Well, they aren't worth much at 40 cents a pound, but the cans are. "It's a little money for the kids," says Shecapio.

Community Assets is a new feature in The Nation. Please send in names of people who you think are an asset to your community and why they are. In this way we can recognize in each other all the good that we do for each other to make our communities a better place. YEAH, WE GOT BOOKS

Announcing The Nation's first ever book column. We'll be reviewing books from all over. If there's a book you loved, hated or mutilated and you'd like us to do a review or want to do one yourself, give us a call. Comments, tips, whatever. 514.272.3077. This week, something a little out of the ordinary to kick it off...

THE ILLUMINATUS! TRILOGY
BY ROBERT ANTON WILSON AND ROBERT SHEA

BANTAM DOUBLEDAY DELL PUBLISHING GROUP, 1975, NEW YORK

I am on page 598 of this 805-page book and I'm still not sure who's the good guys and who's the bad guys. This cult classic from the 70s is definitely one of the strangest, most mind-bending books in print.

Full of bizarre conspiracies which just might be true, this book reveals who killed JFK, why there's a pyramid on the U.S. dollar bill, how people from Atlantis founded the United States and the story of the hash-smoking Muslim assassins known as Hashishim. Then there is the far-out cult that may or may not be from outer space which wants to kill everyone just to get an unforgettable high. Now that's one serious craving! These guys make the bikers who blew up our neighbourhood bar the other day look like Snufalupagus. But the wacked-out guys who want to stop them may be far worse. I'm not really sure! The authors love to not only keep you guessing, but turn your reality upside down and inside out. It's a trip, boy!

Grieving after the loss of my son, Benjamin

By Susan Esau

When I heard of another young man's passing recently, I felt I needed to share with those who are grieving. I hope that it may bring some comfort to them. Susan E.

I want to share with you my experience of the pain and grief after losing a second son to death. I believe that my sharing will help someone who might be experiencing the same pain of losing someone they love.

I was blessed with four children, three handsome boys and a beautiful daughter. I have Kevin and Melanie whom I love very dearly. They share this painful experience with me. They provide the comfort during the hardest and darkest times in my life. My oldest son Merle committed suicide in August 1992. Ben passed away unexpectedly this summer. They both live on in my heart and in the precious memories they left behind.

My youngest son passed away on August 20 1997. He was a young man who just turned eighteen years old exactly six months before that fateful day. That day started like any other day. We all woke up and started our day like any other. School had started a few days before and he seemed to be enthusiastic and committed to finishing his secondary V. He had abandoned his studies in frustration a few months before the end of last year. That evening he went to play basketball with his friends and I went to my meeting. A few hours later, he collapsed while playing and he was lying in the clinic with a team of nurses and a doctor around him, trying desperately to make him breathe and get his heart beating. I was standing there holding his hand and stroking his hair and urging him to breathe. It was the most helpless and frustrating situation that I ever found myself in. As any parent, I wanted to be the one lying on that bed, I wanted to be the one in his place. At the same time I was trying to pray but I couldn't find the words. I had hopes that with all the modern equipment and the new technology of today, they will successfully revive him and he will be okay. Somehow he will get up and be his normal self and be a bit embarrassed about the commotion and concern for him. An hour had passed after he was brought in, there still was no sign of Ben breathing on his own. Minutes later a plane took him away, along with a doctor and a nurse to the nearest hospital. I was told later that their lifesaving efforts did not stop all the way to the hospital.

I was still hopeful as I packed my overnight bag. I waited for a flight to take me to him. I packed a change of clothes for him, thinking we will be coming home together in a few days. The time slowly passed as I waited for a plane to arrive or for a call from the hospital to tell me he was all right. I don't remember the time when they came to tell me that he died. I just remember feeling this unbearable pain, thinking that he will not be coming home alive. I cried and cried until I couldn't cry anymore. I remember feeling angry and not wanting to believe what was happening. I wanted to wake up from this nightmare and everything would be okay again. When I'm in my normal mental state, I understand that death is a part of life, which is the end of our life cycle, but at that time, I refused to comprehend that the Creator has destined his life to end that evening. I was thinking how unfair and cruel God could be to have him die at such a young age. I felt that the time I had with him wasn't long enough. I selfishly wanted him to be close to me, to feel his love, to hear his joyous laughter and to put his arms around me for a hug as he often did. I wanted to hear his voice, I wanted to laugh at his mischievous ways. I wanted to tell him I love him and say all the things that I left unsaid. I wanted him back alive. I wanted my son back with me. Now I know he is with me spiritually but I still long for his physical presence. I have a hard time accepting that he is not coming back. I haven't reached that part of my grieving. I still momentarily forget that he is gone for good, I sometimes think he is at home.

Prior to the funeral when my family and friends were with me I felt comfort. At the same time I wanted them to leave me alone. I wanted everyone to go away. I felt if they left, Ben would be back. I had all these mixed feelings. I wanted to crawl in a hole and die. I was in shock. I was in shock. I was so angry at the Creator, I couldn't even pray. I was going through the motions of living, making decisions for the funeral, comforting people, reading cards and accepting the food and flowers that were brought to the house. I shed so many tears and I really wished that this nightmare would come to an end. At times, I would think that I understood what was happening, but I didn't think that I had enough courage and strength to face it. I wanted to run away. Although I had these people around me showing their love and support, I felt so alone and so hurt. I thought nobody understood what I was feeling. Now I know that these thoughtful and concerned people help ease the burden of carrying the immense anguish alone. The funeral itself was a blur of events. I somehow found the strength to pay my final tribute to Ben. I kept thinking that it was a dream that I would wake up from soon.

Today, I am still mourning for my son. I have experienced this painful process before. I am learning that grief is not the same for every loss. The profound pain is the same. Each person that touches our lives affects us differently. Each person that loses someone is different. Each grief is unique. I hope to help others understand and accept that their emotions and feelings are normal. That one must deal with grief in their own way to what is acceptable to them.

These days, I still have my ups and downs. When I feel the unbearable pain, sometimes I still wish there was some pill to relieve the ache in my heart, but there's no such thing. Only time can heal this pain. There are days when I still get angry. I want to hit something or somebody, but I don't know what or who. I feel like throwing a tantrum. I want to scream and throw things around. I have found some positive ways to help me through my grieving. I have friends and other people I can talk to. I also find comfort in praying. I cry when I need to and I am thankful that my children understand the tears that I must shed. I don't have to hide the tears from them. They share my grief with understanding and compassion. I know there will be many more tears. The writing I am doing is a big part of my grieving and my eventual healing. I know that I will find acceptance one day as I had with the loss of my other son. I don't know how much time that will require. I take it one day at a time. I find comfort in the belief that the Creator came to take Ben home. There is a sense of serenity in believing we will be together again some day.

When I think back on that evening when Ben and I crossed paths for the last time and went about our ways. How I wish that I had taken the time to tell him that I loved him and that I was very proud of him. When I think about my son, Ben so young, healthy and athletic, death was something that never entered my mind and much less expected. I assumed that my children would outlive me. I cannot question the reason the Creator chose to take Ben back. I know that He had given my the privilege to love him and to have him share his life with me and his brothers and his sister and girlfriend Flora. These words of wisdom that my grandmother once said came to mind, "That the children we have are not ours to keep, they are God's children, and he puts them in our care for a time and he takes them back when the time comes." I understand that the Creator has a purpose for us in life. Ben had served his purpose. I understand that life is precious, that I must live it to the fullest and not hold back the unconditional love that I should be sharing with people, especially my children. I demonstrate my love for them in any way I can in my daily life. I find some peace in knowing that Ben died knowing that I loved him very much and this love didn't end that day.

I wish to express my thanks to those who made every effort to save Ben's life. My gratitude goes to the people who sent cards and flowers, for the prayers and words of comfort and to those that contributed in any way. On behalf of my children Kevin and Melanie and of Ben's girlfriend Flora, I thank you so much. A special acknowledgement is extended to the youth that came and brought solace to us during this painful time. Your demonstration of the tremendous love and compassion has indeed eased the burden that my family and I had to bear. May God bless all of you! I thank God, my Creator for the gifts that He has given me, my life and my children, Merle, Kevin, Benjamin and Melanie.

Finally, I want to share this poem that I read during the funeral. It was taken from one of the Chicken Soup for the Soul books. The author is unknown. I felt that this poem was the appropriate legacy that Ben would leave for me and the rest of us who knew and loved him.

The Legacy

When I die, give what is left of me to children
If you need to cry, cry for your brothers walking beside you Put your arms around anyone and give them what you need to give me

I want to leave you with something,
Something better than words or sounds.
Look for me in the people I have known and loved
And if you cannot live without me,
Then let me live on in your eyes, your mind
and your acts of kindness
You can love me most by letting hands touching hands,
And letting go of children that need to be free.

Love does not die, people do
So when all that is left of me is love...
Give me away...

BROKEN PROMISES TO CREE ENTREPRENEURS

Under the James Bay Agreement, Canada and Quebec and their agencies including the James Bay Development Corporation, Hydro Quebec and the James Bay Energy Corporation are supposed to help Cree entrepreneurs obtain the business contracts and training necessary so that Crees can take part in all development activity throughout Eeyou Estchee.

This hasn't happened.

For example, they are supposed to be encouraging Crees to own and operate gas stations on the main highways. They are supposed to negotiate contracts, like snow plowing and other services needed in the territory, with Crees.

They haven't done it.

In fact, Quebec and its agencies see themselves as business rivals to the Crees rather than partners.

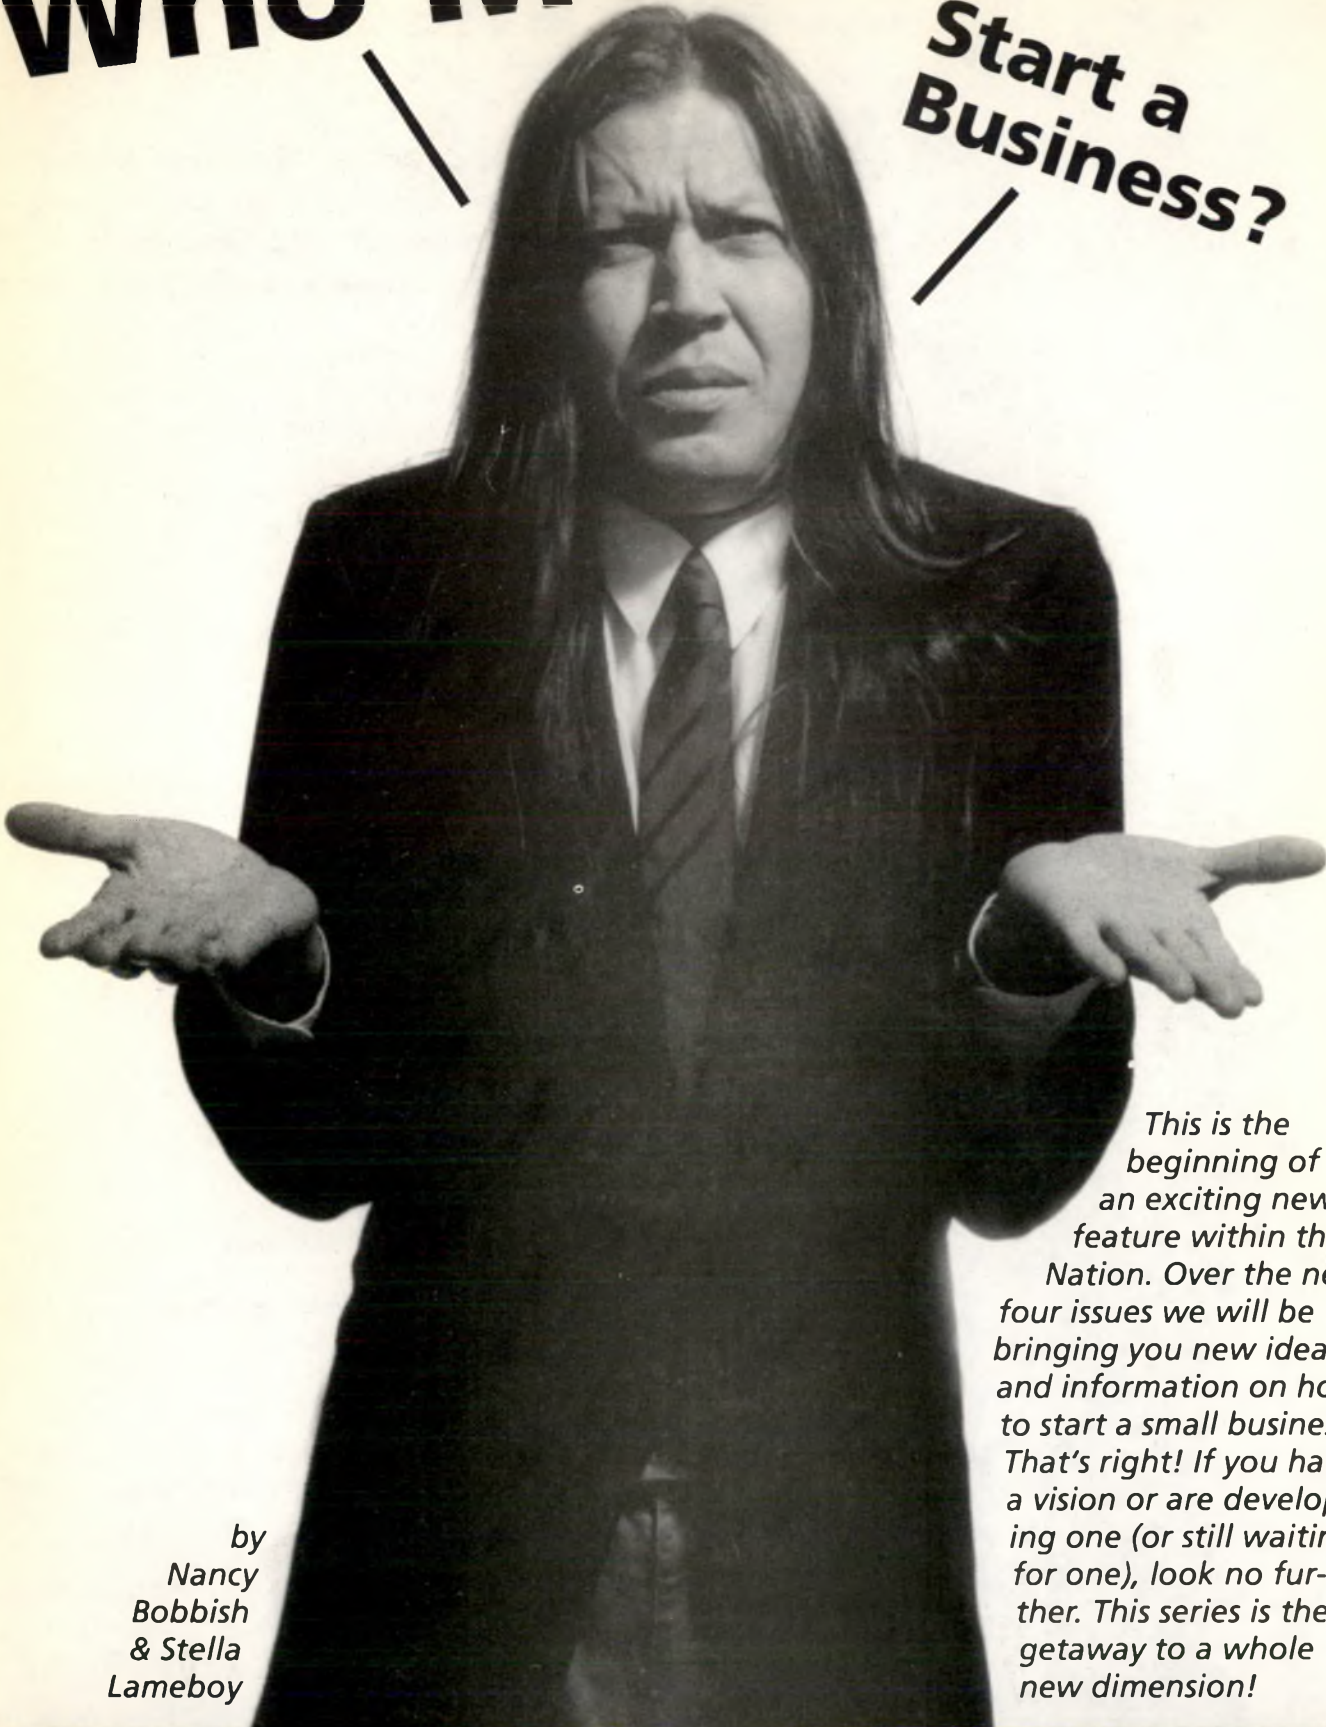

It's time the door was opened so Cree entrepreneurs can take their proper place in the economic activity of their homeland.

The Grand Council of the Crees is fighting to make these promises a reality. But while we fight, people should be getting ready to take up these opportunities once the doors are open. So get yourself started. Open a small business. Get the experience. Have something to offer.

GET YOURSELF READY.

Who Me?

A black and white photograph of a man with long, dark hair, wearing a dark suit, white shirt, and striped tie. He has a confused or questioning expression on his face, with his eyebrows furrowed and his mouth slightly open. His hands are outstretched to the sides, palms up, in a gesture of uncertainty or surrender. The background is plain and light-colored.

Start a Business?

This is the beginning of an exciting new feature within the Nation. Over the next four issues we will be bringing you new ideas and information on how to start a small business. That's right! If you have a vision or are developing one (or still waiting for one), look no further. This series is the getaway to a whole new dimension!

This first instalment of the Entrepreneurial series has been sponsored by the Grand Council of the Crees.

Do you have w

Yeah, man...
I got the juice!

So let's start at the beginning.
Are you the type to be a good entrepreneur? To find out, answer these simple questions.

Have you ever thought ...

I wish I was my own boss...

or

I wonder how hard it would be to start up a business?

Think about it, you probably possess skills and talents that could put you into business.

Do you sometimes do handy-work for a neighbour, friend or elder in your community?

Are you an expert seamstress who sometimes sell their creations privately?

Are you a baker or chef extraordinaire who sells their baked goods right out of the kitchen?

*Do you maybe fix: bikes, toys,
stereos, washers & dryers, VCRs or other equipment in your spare time?*

*Do you know about plumbing,
painting, electrical wiring,
carpentry or even yard-work
and landscaping?*

How are you at organizing events, putting together shows or activities?

what it takes?

EVER THOUGHT OF TURNING YOUR SKILLS, TALENTS AND ENERGY INTO A BUSINESS OWNED AND RUN BY NONE OTHER THAN YOURSELF?

TAKE THE TEST

Do you have the entrepreneurial spirit?

1. How would you best describe yourself?

- ☐ A. Hard working and full of energy
- ☐ B. Works well when interested
- ☐ C. Can't get up before noon
- ☐ D. Couch potato

2. Have you ever thought of starting a business?

- ☐ A. It's a dream
- ☐ B. I think about it from time to time
- ☐ C. Nope!
- ☐ D. I don't know...Me... Are you serious?

3. A business means: _____

- ☐ A. Commitment
- ☐ B. Being your own boss
- ☐ C. Ripping people off
- ☐ D. Having a stroke!

If you have answered mainly A or B, you could be on your way to becoming an entrepreneur. But if you have answered mainly C or D, do not despair. Stick with us: the entrepreneurial bug might bite you yet!

TRUE OR FALSE

I'll get rich quick! T or F

I'll be working like a dog T or F

I need lots of money to start T or F

REALITY:

- 1) False: Do not expect to make millions the first year (or maybe ever). It takes a business at least 2 years to establish itself. If you're looking for instant financial gratification ... keep looking!
- 2) True: You will probably work harder then you've ever worked in your life. Success in a new business is 1% a good idea and 99% hard work. But if you're doing something you love, if you have a partner or a group of people working with you - it will be the most satisfying work you've ever done.
- 3) False: In fact, it's better to start small and grow with your business. Don't wait for that $100,000 loan (You might not live that long). Look at C. Brien from Mississauga. He started Denise Restaurant with nothing but two Coleman stoves. Save your money, borrow what you can and Just Do It.

What best describes your beliefs?

- 1. Doing something new stimulates me, I like to explore.
- 2. I like to work from 9-5, because many other things besides work are important to me.
- 3. When I start something, I don't give up easily no matter what the obstacles are.
- 4. Instead of being in charge, I'd rather someone else tell me what needs to be done - and I do it.
- 5. I prefer people who propose new (even strange) ideas, even if they involve taking a risk.
- 6. I prefer to do things in ways that have already been proven to work. Then I like to improve on them.
- 7. I work well alone and with others, no one needs to hold my hand.
- 8. I want to get rich quick. That's my idea of a good business.
- 9. I like to go to social gatherings even though I don't know anybody there.
- 10. I prefer staying at home on weekends.

If you've answered positively to 1,3,5,7,9, you're a definite candidate for entrepreneurship. If you answered positively to 2,4,6,8,10, your skills and personality type would be an asset to any entrepreneur. It takes a risk-taker with initiative to start a business, but it also takes a practical and grounded person to help run it.

If you are interested or have been thinking about having your own business, follow the Cree Entrepreneurial Series for ideas, tips, and information on small business development.

We welcome all of your suggestions, ideas and any issues you would like us to address regarding small business development. So please send your comments to The Nation to the attention of: Nancy Bobbish and Stella Lameboy.

The Cree Board of Health and Social Services of James Bay (Quebec), a Cree-controlled entity, is entering an exciting and challenging phase of organizational development. It is looking for an outstanding individual to serve as

Assistant Executive Director — Administration

Using your proven dynamic leadership and administrative skills, you will lead a team of five managers responsible for the administrative services (finance, purchasing, facilities & maintenance, human resources management and human resources development) provided to line management and the organization at-large.

Reporting to the Executive Director and in partnership with the Assistant Executive Director — Health & Social Services, you will be highly involved in our organizational development.

Ideally, the breadth of your background includes a results oriented management experience of 3-7 years in the public or private sector and a degree in public administration or the equivalent. Knowledge of the Ministry of Health and Social Services regulations is an asset and fluency in both official languages is essential. Additional assets you may bring are experience in First Nations organizations and knowledge of First Nations health or social issues.

The environment requires an executive with superior interpersonal, communication, planning and implementation skills. Past success in human resource management and finance is a must.

A competitive salary and northern benefits consisting of northern allowance, housing, moving & storage are offered to the successful candidate, who will be based in Chisasibi.

To pursue this challenge of contributing to the development of the board, forward your resume by November 15, 1997 to:

Let Us Remember Our Youth

The Cree Nation was shocked when we learned about the sudden and tragic loss of James A. Shecapio and his daughter Amanda. James was a rising young leader. He was the former Youth Chief and then was presently the Chairman of the Cree Board of Health and Social Services.

All of his life James worked to improve the lives of others. He displayed wisdom beyond his years. He saw that the youth needed to be involved with the day to day operations of the Cree communities and in the ongoing struggle to protect our rights as the Cree People.

Amanda was raised to follow in the footsteps of her father. She was certainly, along with his surviving child, a guiding light in his efforts to make the world a better place for the Cree youth. Their passing should remind us of the fragility of life and the importance to do the best we can every day to work together toward our common interests in our youth.

The youth are the future of the Cree Nation. Whatever we can do to help them to appreciate and understand the importance of our culture, language, environment and the viability of our communities will be important to the continuation of our heritage and the health of our communities in the future. We the Cree leaders have the responsibility to open the doors for the youth to bring them into the circle of leadership, as they are the hope of the Cree People.

My deepest sympathy goes out to the Shecapio family and his fiancée Francine Weistche.

The joys of having a boyfriend?

Isn't having a boyfriend the greatest? Most of the time, yes, but what about all those annoying little habits that you have to put up with? When it's love, you learn to compromise and understand each other's quirks and bad habits, and in the end, it's all worth it! If you're single, appreciate what you've got on your own - after you find the right guy you may never be the same again! Watch out - if you are with someone who takes more from you than he gives back, don't expect him to change. Stop fooling yourself - you deserve the best!

Here is a look at the ups and downs of having a guy in your life:

PROS

You can finally stop searching for Mr.Right
You have someone to help with the housework
You're so proud of him for getting the most geese
If you're living together you can finally afford cable
You get to wear all of his comfy, oversized clothes
He's there to take care of you when you're sick
You have someone to bitch and complain to
You have someone to snuggle up with in bed
You have someone to dance with to all your favorite sappy songs

CONS

You can no longer admire Mr.Right-Now from afar
He creates a bigger mess than you've ever seen
You're the lucky girl who gets to pluck them all
You learn more about the NHL than you've ever wanted to
You have to pick them up off the floor and wash them first
He stubs his toe and whines about it for days
He bitches and complains to everyone else about you
He hogs the blankets
The only time he dances is when his favorite team scores a goal

The Twilight Zone

Your Horrorscope

By Thelma & Louise

Aquarius (Jan 20-Feb 18) Okay, so folks haven't been nice to you. Big deal! Grow-up. Maybe you haven't been nice to the folks. Ever thought of that? We're tired of giving you advice you don't use. This is your last warning: or else we will use that "Bomb-de-Terre" on you!

Pisces (Feb 19-March 20) Come on's are coming your way. Prepare for dinner a la bedroom. It's all about love, love, love. All we are saying is give peace a chance. Even to those cold amphibians you call friends. Give them a break of that Kit-Kat bar.

Aries (March 20-April 19) It's a marathon telephonefest at your place for some reason. What's the occasion? Did your neighbor have a bowel movement? You felt it was your duty as a moral civilian to inform the world. All around the world, where you stop nobody knows.

Taurus (April 20-May 19) Your life is a yellow light. Proceed like Villeneuve and hit the petal to the metal. Admit it, you are the yellow light. Everything you touch turns to gold. So be careful where you touch yourself.

Gemini (May 20-June 21) You are like an octopus. You are in a sea of floating jelly. You are in control of this world. You have the stamina of a seahorse. Caution: do not swim in uncharted waters. Consequences could be fatal.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Bell wants you as their national spokesperson. Why? The phone is ringing off the hook at your house. Every smooth operator wants your number. Your answering machine should say, the number you have dialed is not available.

Leo (July 23-Aug 22) What about love? Don't you want someone to care about you? Don't let it slip away. If single, take a risk. Life is a risk then you die. Remember it's about living life without regrets or not living at all.

Virgo (Aug 23-Sept 22) We lost our thoughts. We'll get back to you next issue. Just kidding! We wouldn't forget the most innocent sign of the zodiac (or so you would like them to believe). It will be easy street this month. Only if you stand in the right place on the right night.

Libra (Sept 23-Oct 22) It's all a smoky dream. Maxing out the plastic is not a good idea. Showers of gold and silver are not meant for you my dear Libra. But be optimistic. Hard work will pay-off tenfold.

Scorpio (Oct 23-Nov 21) Don't promise anyone anything you can't deliver. Yes, old habits will be hard to die. A train of intensity is speeding down your way at full steam. Get ready to rumble, on the street or in your sheets!

Sagittarius (Nov 22-Dec 22) You're one spooky son of a bitch. Where did all those weird ideas come from? Are you a member of the Psychic connection or what? Use the power wisely. May the force be with you my sister/brother/etc.

Capricorn (Dec 23-Jan 19) Work, work, work. Don't complain. This was your idea remember. Scope out the singles during the day. Use the night wisely and get your beauty sleep. The night-life urges should be expressed only in REM sleep.

We are the people, Lucien Bouchard cries out!

We are Eeyou/Eenou, we cry out!

We are Inuit, our northern brothers and sisters cry out.

We are Innu, the Montagnais cry out.

I thought that is what a group of persons are called, I cry out.

Wow, the debate over distinct society, distinct peoples, distinction leads to extinctions, I say. Whatever amounts to a definition of people and what race, language, ethnicity, family structure, anything that has anything to do with identification seems logical. But... whatever happened to saying that we are from somewhere, we live somewhere and we live according to what our social and environmental needs are?

I always thought that the English were from England and the French were from France and the bilinguals were from Canada or the middle of the English Channel (or in transit in the Chunnel). It's too bad that bridges have to be built over non-existent boundaries and over self-troubled waters in order to get along. It's bad enough to build dams to cover deficits of a government whose own intent is to build an even bigger barrier called separation, distinction, sovereignty in a system that is not designed to accommodate its own constitution.

Fix the problem, is the secret password in the halls of government, but is the problem really with identification? Who we are? Where we come from? How we live? I think not. I think that the problem lies with putting the blame on others for problems created by those in charge, or think they are in charge.

Our problem is with our own society, and in answering these questions, who are we, where are we going, what is our vision of our future. What land will our children stand on? Is the future so unimaginable that tearing up our traditions and lifestyles so important to growth of a nation? The Creator gave life to us through our parents and their parents and so on until the time of Creation. We were made to be a nation of people, to be a family of the world.

The Quebec government is busy trying to build barriers and boundaries when the rest of the world is trying to tear them down and participate in the world community as a world nation, free trade and all (except maybe for the North American Free Trade Agreement where corporate boundaries seem to be very vague).

Talking about dams, why don't we flood the St. Lawrence Seaway (à la Grand Canal) until all toxic substances are flushed out so that the poor people in the south can have their own drinking water?

Yes, Hydro-Quebec is trying to do the same to their workers in Radisson as the government did to the Inuit families of Inukjuak when they were relocated to Grize Fiord just to lay sovereign claim to the Arctic, put them where they don't belong or don't want to live. So, grow up, people of Quebec, live in the international world, where we all belong.

Grandpa Reggie (The Boss)

My memories of you;
Time to check the fish net
Time to check the traps
Time to cut some wood
Then bring the wood inside

I remember;
When you used to sit on your chair
with a cup of tea in your hand with a tooth pick in your mouth with a shack over your head

There were times when you got angry
There were times when you got anxious
There were times when you were tired

But I was there to help you.

Forgotten not;
You were the hunter
you were the legend
you were my role model
You were my Grandfather
You were my true friend
Those were the times I will always cherish with all my heart.

100-BIRTHS

Congratulations to my friend Angel V. and Ahmed on the birth of their baby boy on October 10, 1997. I wish all the best and happiness in life. Friend always,
From Rachel Longchap.

Birthday greetings going out to one of my beautiful sisters, also, who happens to be my namesake Judy Janie Lynn Angela Kanatewat, all the way to Ottawa, on October 27th, 1997. Wishing you a wonderful birthday on your special day and many more to come. We'll be seeing you soon, in the meantime take care of yourself and be fgood. We miss you so much, especially your silly remarks But it won't be long now, you'll see, before you know it, it will be christmas again. Missing you, Love, your not so _____ sister Charlotte, Rusty, Steve, Candi and Darius. P.S.

This is going out to Caroline
Grondin in Val d'Or. Her children would like to wish her a happy birthday on November 15. With many wishes of health, happiness and prosperity. M is for the mother who gives us wonderful memories.
O is for your outstanding efforts as a mother. T is for your tender loving heart. H is for the happiness you bring to our lives as children. E is for the everlasting love you give to us. R is for the richness you will always bring into our hearts and our lives.
